Oleg Logvinov, Chief Executive Officer of the company and its wholly owned subsidiary, Arkados, Inc., commented, "Securing this first part of our financing marks an extremely significant point in our development for many reasons. First, it is a key step in our effort to restructure our balance sheet. Secondly, we believe that it provides the company with the appropriate working capital necessary to permit Arkados to start marketing its ArkTIC family of powerline networking solutions in a meaningful way, and to expand its development effort in connection with our next generation products based on the recently announced HomePlug AV specification. As an officer of the HomePlug Alliance, I can't help but be enthusiastic that this capital infusion coincides with the Alliance's recent announcements that Intel, Motorola and General Electric joined the Alliance's board, and that the HomePlug AV specification, into which Arkados has had significant development input, is approved."
